FIRST COLONY OF GERMANS IN TEXAS

bring into their camp the horses and oxen that had strayed.
Kloberg continues in his notes: "We had supplied ourselves with everything necessary to commence a settlement in a new country. We had wagons, farming implements, all sorts of tools, household and kitchen furniture, and clothing, which we had brought with us from Germany. Early in the summer of 1835 we had finished building two log houses, one of them had even a floor and a ceiling; we had sawed by hand the planks from post oak trees.

"We had also enclosed and planted a field of ten acres in corn and cotton and we now moved the members of our family, who had remained in Harrisburg, to our settlement. Such of our goods for which we had no room or immediate use, we left at the house we had rented at Harrisburg. Among the objects we left was a fine piano, belonging to my wife, many valuable oil paintings, music, books, etc., all of which fell a prey to the flames which consumed Harrisburg during the war in the following spring."

This was the beginning of the present town of Cat Spring, Austin county, which up to date has preserved a thoroughly German character. Industry and Cat Spring, Austin county, and Nueces's settlement, in Nueces county, founded in 1835, were the first pure German settlements in Texas. Baron Bastrop's colony in Bastrop county was established some years previous to these settlements, but most of the colonists there were Americans from the states, only interspersed with some Germans from Oldenburg.

Of the pioneer German settlers in Texas, Robert Kloberg was by far the most prominent and influential.

"SNOWBALL" BECOMES A DETECTIVE AND ARRESTS BOY
Clayborne White, aged 15 years, known as "Snowball," became a detective Saturday morning when he arrested a boy, aged 17 years, on a charge of theft of a bicycle and turned him over to Jesse C. Staniel, chief of the city detective department. "Snowball" told the detectives that he saw Lopez trying to sell a bicycle on South Santa Fe street, and he "suspected" that the wheel had been stolen. He reported Lopez he said and accused him of taking the bicycle. A broken lock, which was delivered to the detectives, "Snowball" said he took out of Lopez's pocket. After making the arrest Snowball did not phone for the patrol wagon. Instead he placed the defendant on the wheel in front of him, and thus rode him to the police station.

CLEVELAND'S POLICE CHIEF DENIES IMMORALITY CHARGE.
Cleveland, Ohio, March 8.—Amended charges detailing the allegations under which chief of police Fred Koehler is to be tried for "gross immorality" by the civil service commission were made public when Koehler was arraigned before the commission.
The official document claims that on three separate occasions the chief "surreptitiously visited the home of Samuel D. Scherer," who recently obtained a divorce, naming Koehler in his petition.
Chief Koehler pleaded not guilty.

SAYS HE TOOK TWO SMALL
TODDIES; WATCH DISAPPEARED
H. G. McClemy, a fireman on the Fort Worth & Denver railroad, running out of Wichita Falls, Tex. Saturday morning reported to the city detectives the loss of a watch and $45. The fireman stated that Friday night he took two small toddies in two different saloons. After the second toddy he said he did not remember anything. He woke up Saturday morning, he stated, in his room and found his watch and money missing.

ELECTION ASKED TO NAME JUDGE

ter is a Texan, having moved out from Dallas less than three years ago. The short time he has resided in Arizona is against him, but he has the backing of some Johnson, head of the Texas Wilson delegation at the Democratic national convention.

Sam L. Patton, of Tucson, is still another candidate. Nearly every Democratic attorney in the state is in a receptive mood. Among those whose names are being pushed by their friends are the supreme court judges, Alfred Franklin, D. L. Cunningham and Henry D. Ross.

Petitions Circulated.
One petition asking governor Hunt to call an election to give the people an opportunity to express their preference for judge has already been filed. It was circulated by Fred A. Larson, a Phoenix attorney, and bears the names of 15 local citizens.

Larson is now circulating another petition and says that he has secured 50 names. The election must be called if 15 percent of the registered voters demand it.

Judge Sloan, who has now retired to private life, came to Arizona in 1884, practiced law in Phoenix. Was elected a member of the territorial council from Pinal county, and in 1889 began his judicial career under an appointment by president Harrison as an associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona. He was assigned to the first judicial district, at Tucson. In 1894 he returned to the practice of his profession, at Prescott, but in 1902 and 1908, in 1910, he was appointed territorial judge. President McKinley appointed him in 1902 and 1908. In 1910, he was a compromise delegate of two warring factions of the Republican party in Arizona to the national convention. The fact that he was thus shown to be acceptable to both factions caused president Taft to appoint him governor in 1910. Until Arizona became a state he filled that office with great efficiency.

Failure of Confirmation.
When Judge Sloan was appointed governor the understanding was that he was to be made federal judge when Arizona entered the union. President Taft kept his word by sending the nomination of Judge Sloan to the senate, but it was never confirmed. Senator Mark Smith and Henry Ashurst, urged by the Democrats of Arizona, who wanted to see one of their number get the office, made a determined fight against him. The president then gave Judge Sloan the position temporarily, under a recess appointment.

EL PASO LOST CATTLEMAN
BY A VERY CLOSE VOTE.
Several of the delegates to the Amador cattleman's convention have returned. C. A. Kinne said that if the vote had been taken before noon El Paso would have secured the convention, but many of El Paso's friends had to leave that afternoon and could not stay through the session. He says El Paso lost by two votes. El Paso had only 10 workers and Oklahoma City had 160.

Those who have returned to El Paso are: C. A. Kinne, D. T. White, H. M. Patterson, R. E. Thompson, A. L. McKnight and Luke Bright, the latter of Marfa, Tex.

JAPANESE PEOPLE SLOW TO REVOLT

bested free passes and traveling expenses.

Aristocratic Power Great.
For over a decade the people have been murmuring that the aristocrats are too powerful. They have been agitating steadily for a revision of the constitution. They advocate longer sessions of the diet, more power for the house of representatives, more elective members in the house of peers, and that the cabinet shall be responsible directly to the diet instead of to the emperor alone. In other words, the people of Japan would develop into a real democracy like the United States or Great Britain. They would continue to do great homage to the emperor. In fact, they would not object to a benevolent despotism by that worshipping personage, provided he really did the governing. But they will no longer tolerate being bossed by a few clan leaders and the titled members of an all-powerful aristocracy who induce the Son of Heaven to sanction their schemes. To all this the bureaucrats have presented an invincible defiance until recently.

Are Slow to Rebel.
The unwillingness of the people to rebel against their superiors has been the principal reason for their comparative alliance in the face of actual despotism under the guise of constitutionalism. Respect for authority is indeed very strong in Japan, but casual students of Japanese affairs have been greatly mistaken in thinking that the people were satisfied with their government. There has been unrest in Japan for a long time, and the poverty brought by the war with Russia, plus the endless conflict between old customs and the new western ways, has contributed to it.

Bureaucrats, and they have been in the majority, have always displayed great contempt for the demands of the people. They have considered themselves almost as divinely appointed as the emperor himself. The people thought the same until lately, but that day has passed forever. One reason why progress has not been made faster has been the unfitness of the principal representatives of the people to give themselves. As a rule, the democratic members have been venal or greatly inferior to the bureaucrats. The capable ones usually joined the bureaucrats by accepting titles.

Lack of respectable political organizations has also been a great hindrance. The principal parties are Seiyukai and Kokuminto, but neither has ever controlled affairs. Indeed, the best men have stood aloof from them, and it took the stirring events of the present crisis to show that the rise of representative party government has begun in Japan.
